Instead of gas

Firm to study coal conversion possibility here

by Herb Meeker

A Champaign engineering firm will conduct a study at Eastern this summer to determine the feasibility of converting the university power plant from natural gas to coal.

The firm of Brown, Davis, Mullins & Associates, Inc., has agreed to determine the technical and economic feasibility of modifying three boilers to allow the use of Illinois coal in Eastern's power plant. Larry Metzroth, research technician for the Illinois Capital Development Board, said the study is expected to begin by July 1. The firm will be paid $20,000 for the study, Metzroth said.

The study is being financed equally by the Capital Development Board and grants obtained by Eastern through the U.S. Department of Energy, David Curry, CDB public information officer, said.

Curry said the study will involve power plant performance analysis, air pollution evaluation, design and budget considerations and the amount of energy savings achieved after conversion. The CDB expects the firm to complete its study of the power plant by September.

Last fall, the CDB conducted a preliminary study of Eastern's power plant for the possibility of coal conversion. Martin Ignazito, assistant director of the physical plant, said the CDB's conclusion was "Let's study it further."

The CDB made its recommendations, including those concerning the Charleston power plant, to the Governors Task Force on Energy Conservation and Coal Conversion earlier this year.

The task force was formed to determine the technical and financial considerations involved with converting state-owned facilities from oil and gas to Illinois coal.

Due to the high sulfur content of Illinois coal reserves, possible pollution impact is being included in the study. Metzroth said the CDB will "make sure the system will comply with EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) standards."

Metzroth said the EPA has given the three boilers in question a special designation which will not require the installation of "scrubbers" (an expensive anti-pollution device which removes soot and ash from the smoke stacks) if the power plant is converted to coal. However, devices will be needed to battle the particulate problem, Metzroth said.

Ignazito saw no problems in this area with sulfur pollution, "unless someone else in Charleston starts burning coal, then maybe scrubbers will be needed," he said.

Metzroth said after the study is completed in September, the CDB will review the financial and technical points. If all concerns are met then a mechanical engineering firm will begin making designs for the actual conversion project.

Metzroth mentioned four factors which will affect the coal conversion of the Eastern plant. Firstly, the coal handling system, taking it from storage to the boilers by conveyors. Secondly, air pollution control by way of filters to pick up the particulates from the boilers. Thirdly, coal storage, a location to safely store at least a two-week reserve and fourthly is the condition of the boilers and the costs of their modernization.

Metzroth gave no estimates on the costs of conversion of the Eastern plant since no preliminary estimates have been made prior to this summer's study.

A similar study will be conducted at Western Illinois University this summer and another was recently completed at the University of Illinois Champaign-Urbana campus. No figures were given on the costs of these studies.

Ignazito said according to his information the CDB had set fall, 1982 as the target date for conversion of the Eastern power plant to coal.

This now unused coal hopper could be revived in the near future if Eastern converts its power source from oil to coal. An engineering firm will begin a $20,000 study on the feasibility of the conversion on July 1. The study is expected to be completed by September. (News photo by Bob Kasinecz)

City water rates to rise July 1 by 27 percent

by Vicki Shaw

The Charleston City Council made it official Tuesday night that water rates are going to rise by 27 percent July 1.

The second water rate increase in six months was approved by the council members Olga Durham, Wayne Lanman and Mayor Bob Hickman. Commissioners Clancy Pfeiffer and John Beusch were absent from the meeting.

The water rate hike is directly related to the April 8 side-channel reservoir referendum, which was passed by Charleston residents. New water rates must be set before general obligation bonds for the project can be sold, Durham said.

The new rates will increase monthly rates from $2.95 per 1,000 gallons to $3.75 per 1,000 gallons, for residents with both water and sewer service. The new rate will be $3.25 per 1,000 gallons for those without sewer service.

In other action, the council voted to raise the rate of ambulance service from $35 to $60 plus $1 per mile for emergencies and $1.50 for non-emergencies.

Lanman said the recent rise in the price of gas influenced the mileage cost which was $1 per mile for both emergencies and non-emergencies.

Hickman noted the statewide rates for ambulance service ranged from $45 per call to $150.

The council placed on file for public inspection resolutions for the allocations of $65,000 for the relocation of a municipal city line and

Enrollment hits 2,930 Wednesday

by Frank Adducei

Although financial cuts in money allocated for the summer school budget has resulted in a reduction of course offerings, Summer enrollment reached approximately 2,930 students Wednesday.

Summer School Director Charles Switzer said Tuesday he hopes to stay "within shooting distance" of last year's summer enrollment.

Switzer said he was encouraged by Monday's registration of 637 students. That is an increase of 137 students who registered on Monday of last year.

"To have 1200 people go through central registration on Monday and Tuesday will make us reasonably close to what we had in enrollment last year," Switzer said.

And there are late registering students which will add to the enrollment figure. Switzer said last year there were around 100 late registering students.

"All we can really do is guess what the enrollment figure might be," Switzer said. "The preregistration process in the past summers has only registered about 60 percent of our students."

"So, when we come to central registration we have approximately 40 percent of the students not yet registered," Switzer said all he can do is hope that the 40 percent does materialize.

He said this presents difficulties in the planning of what courses to offer.

"You have to rely on enrollment histories to plan course offerings," Switzer explained. "But what we've had in the past has not always been an accurate predictor of what we will have in the future."

"And when we come up with new offerings, we do not have any past enrollment histories."

This makes the decision-making

'Future' workshops to feature visiting faculty

by Frank Adducci

Four prominent futurists have been selected to participate in the second distinguished-visiting-faculty workshop series during summer school. Magoroh Maruyama, cultural futurist; Robert Millis from the Lowell Observatory in Arizona; Peter Kartcoski, professor of sociology and criminal justice at Kent State University; and Harold Shane, authority on the future of education will teach the five workshops held beginning Monday and running through July 24. A student can obtain one credit hour by enrolling in any of the workshop areas. He can do so without additional cost if his summer load is under 10 semester hours. "It is possible for a regular summer student to add the workshop even up to the time the course begins," Summer School Director Charles Switzer said. "If you are already in summer school it is just a matter of going down to the south basement of McAfee and adding the course." The series is part of the summer workshop theme "The Creative Future: The Challenge of the 80s." Students can enroll in workshops which examine the future of education, development, communication and the technology of the 80s. The distinguished-faculty series features courses in astronomy possible cultural changes, education and family violence. Culturalist Maruyama will open the series on Monday with his course "Mindscapes and Future Options." "Maruyama takes a look at the overall world views and philosophies and he classifies them into four world viewpoints," Switzer said. "He looks at what might happen if we go into one social direction or another." "The course will study all of the implications, political, social, and economic," Switzer said. Switzer also said Maruyama will speak at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the University Union Ballroom. The lecture will be free of charge. "This is kind of a bonus for the campus community," Switzer said. "Each of the visiting faculty members will deliver a lecture." He said Shane will deliver his lecture during the "Futures Festival," which is scheduled July 11 through 13. The festival will also feature other guest lecturers along with exhibits, movies, music, theater and art. "We will bring in people from other parts of the country to deal with some future subject," Switzer explained. "It might be the future of education or topics in the news today."

Budget limitations provoke Whaley to resign post

by Laura Rzepka

Hal Whaley, director of the education computer management systems will resign his post effective Aug. 31 because of the additional demands of the computer system by users and the limitations on the budget. Whaley is the second person from the computer center who has resigned this summer. The resignation of Roland Spaniol, director of computer services is effective July 1. Whaley said Spaniol's resignation has no bearing on his decision to leave.

Whaley has been director since November 1978. He is in charge of all off-campus computer services. The computer center currently serves 21 area schools and the Coles County government. Eastern has been working with the schools for the past six to seven years, Whaley said.

Although the university is in the process of reviewing off-campus computer services, Whaley said "I don't know if the service will be reduced but the administration feels they can't extend any additional services."

President Daniel E. Marvin was unavailable for comment.

Whaley said he is resigning based on the anticipated limitations of the services which he can offer to the schools.

"Any limitations will not satisfy them (the area schools)," Whaley said. "Their demands are greater than what we can do. I really feel they need the service," he added.

"I don't know what they (they administration) have planned for the computer center but they are concentrating their efforts more on the campus application of the computers instead of the off-campus applications," Whaley said.

Whaley has proposed a project for the past one and one half years attempting to provide an on-line service for the area schools.

"The funds have not been given to us and I'm not gonna tell you why," Whaley said. "I don't anticipate any monies being available. It would take two to three years to get sufficient funding," he added.

There has not been any additional outside funding for the off-campus computer services, Whaley said. Eastern public relations contributions have footed the bill along with the area schools which the services aid, he added.

"When you work towards a goal and see the political obstacles of the state, you get a little discouraged," Whaley said.

An on-line system would make it possible for area schools to do their computer processing in their own schools, Whaley said.

The on-line system would reduce the demand for the computers at Eastern and could serve a greater amount of schools, Whaley said.

Whaley anticipates a great demand in student usage of the computers because of the increased interest in the data processing curriculum.

"You have to be concerned that you don't overextend the existing system," he added.

The computers here would serve as a back-up service for the on-line system, Whaley said.

Forget Clark, Jimmy stay 'low-key' instead

The Carter administration should drop its plans to prosecute Ramsey Clark and Company for their illegal trip to last week's "Crimes of America" conference in Iran.

Right now the White House is trying to down play the hostage crisis and filing charges against former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and nine other "crusaders" to Tehran will certainly blow this game plan.

Not to say Carter has forgotten the 53 hostages (the most recent tabulation) rather Jimmy doesn't know what else to do. Diplomatic overtures and military force (threatened and aborted) have all failed.

Carter has stopped haranguing about the hostages and is currently "hanging loose" on the crisis in hopes the Iranian moderates will triumph in forcing a release of the Americans. It's an interesting strategy and maybe it will work.

Clark's trip defied a presidential ban on travel to Iran. But what really irked President Carter was Clark's digging into the April 25 rescue attempt and his near prostration before the Ayatollah Khomeini himself at the "Crimes in America" conference. Clark apologized for America's encroachments on Iran, during the Shah's reign but did appeal for the release of the hostages.

If convicted on federal charges, Clark and his co-travelers may each face a ten-year prison sentence and a

Herb
Meeker

$50,000 fine.

Clark and compatriots defended the trip to their conference and his respective theatrics in hopes they would help bring a quicker end to the hostage crisis. They are probably sincere in their belief and some Washington sources think the Iranians held the "Crimes of America" conference to see if any Americans would listen to charges of CIA-Shah related crimes against Iran's population.

Muhammad Ali may have had egocentric goals when he traveled to Iran a few months ago but Ramsey Clark's motives were most likely sincere.

For now it seems Clark's trip to Iran has done no real damage, except to embarrass an already red-faced Carter Administration. Presidential authority is important in times of crisis, but freedom of speech is even more important.

Ramsey Clark's actions have been no breach of security, so President Carter should withdraw all threats to prosecute and keep on playing his "low-key" approach to the hostage crisis.

Mastery tests a must for teachers, students

Teachers who are not qualified to teach and students who are not qualified to graduate and function in the world with basic reading and arithmetic skills face similar predicaments as competency exams for both groups have been proposed in the recent furor over the quality of education.

Competency exams for teachers to test basic skills in fundamentals such as math and English are a relatively new innovation proposed by concerned educators across the country who are worried that the growing problems of America's elementary, high school and college students reflect on the performances of teachers.

The cover story "Teacher Can't Teach" in Time this week, estimates that as many as 20 percent of all teachers have not mastered the basic skills of writing and math necessary for effective teaching.

To determine whether teachers have the skills, a competency exam has been proposed in a number of states which would require either all teachers or new teachers to get a minimum score on a standardized test before being certified to teach.

While the proposals have been met with disfavor by teachers who resent the questioning of their training, the idea is a sound one which should be taken seriously by Eastern's education majors and potential teachers.

As the university which turns out the largest percentage of graduates with teacher certification in Illinois, Eastern teacher education administrators and students planning to enter the teaching field should take steps now to insure that a competency test requirement by a potential employer would not prove four years of undergraduate training and teacher preparation was for naught because the potential teacher did not possess adequate basic skills.

Despite being known as a teacher education college for more than 75 years, Eastern's teacher preparation program is far from perfect. Recent requirements of 100 hours of clinical experiences (observation and participation in classroom activities) is beneficial for introducing future teachers to handling classroom situations, the program has no official competency requirement showing mastery of such basic skills as reading, writing and spelling and math. Such a requirement is necessary not just for Eastern, but for all teacher education programs to root out those students who may do more harm than good by becoming teachers.

On the other side of the coin, competency exams serving the same purpose should be administered in the public schools to lasso and correct the problem of mastering basic skills, before it snowballs. Because problems overlooked in elementary school may then be overlooked in high school, college and ultimately end up back in the public school system.

One step in the right direction is the adoption of "minimum standards of achievement" for public school children in reading and math by the Illinois State Board of Education last week. More important though, than testing for these skills and holding back students who do not pass, is the board's resolve to use the results of the test to make changes in curriculum to rectify the problems.

The legislature is the next step for the board's proposal. It should be passed without delay so Illinois can begin the long haul of repairing an educational system which has come to require only the minimum of its students, who in turn suffer the consequences of not being able to write a simple letter, read a book or file an income tax return.

Letter to the editor

Editor,

To set the record straight, I feel I must let readers of the Eastern News know just what kind of person my brother Bob was. He was a kind, loving brother who, although he was over eight years older than I, entertained and educated me for as long as I can remember. I lived in the country and there was nobody my age to play with and Bob was literally my best friend.

Even now, there was not a time when I sit down to write a story or column for the 'News' when Bob wouldn't ask "what are you writing now" and offer to proofread it for me. I owe a lot to Bob, and therefore I feel since his death has once again been mentioned in this paper that I owe it to him to let people know what Bob Smith was like. He never intentionally hurt anyone except himself, and I know for a fact having him as a brother has been nothing but good for me.

Tennis Club starts league

The Charleston Tennis Club is offering prospective or fanatic tennis buffs the chance to compete with opponents of similar skill.

Allen Maury, an instructor in the economics department at Eastern and a member of the club, said the club has delayed starting the league so more people will have the chance to sign up.

Maury said the purpose of the league is "to introduce people who want to play tennis to other people who want to and giving them an opportunity to play."

For a fee of $5, the club will match a person's tennis skills with those of other area players participating in the league by setting up two matches per week.

For an application and further information call Maury at 581-2719 or 348-8535 or club president Robert Barford at 581-3964 or 345-9653.

Coon receives summer fellowship

by Herb Meeker

Lewis Coon, of Eastern's mathematics department, has received and is currently studying on a National Science Foundation post-doctoral fellowship at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

The fellowship covers three summers of study at any university chosen by the recipient. Coon was one of 40 recipients throughout the United States.

Alphonso DiPietro, Eastern mathematics department chairman, said Coon is taking courses in statistics, computer language skills and linear programming, all of which pertain to business training.

DiPietro said Coon applied for the fellowship in order to improve his knowledge in the mathematics teaching skills required for the School of Business. "Dr. Coon should be commended for his initiative," DiPietro said.

The fellowship pays for tuition, room and board and transportation. DiPietro said these fellowships help universities because "economic restraints" prevent the hiring of new personnel to teach specialized areas such as business math. "Professor Coon can update his mathematics skills in the School of Business due to this fellowship," he added.

This is not the first National Science Foundation fellowship received by an Eastern faculty member. Mathematics instructor Ferrel Atkins attended Stanford University on a NSF Fellowship to study computer science 15 years ago.

Coon chose the University of Michigan because it has a good reputation in its mathematics area, DiPietro said.

DiPietro believes Coon's work will help expand the School of Business.

process even more difficult, he said.

His office also had to contend with a cut in the allocation of summer school money. This cut resulted in a reduction of the summer teaching staff which resulted in a reduction of course offerings.

Switzer said last summer there were 201 teaching positions. That represented a six percent increase of faculty members from the previous summer of 1978.

This year's summer budget is the same as last year's, however a rise in the faculty's salary made it necessary for a reduction in teaching staff positions.

The reduction came to 21 faculty members which translates to 45 fewer courses offered this summer. Switzer called this a conservative estimate.

"The other thing that happened was that the faculty full-time teaching load this summer became six semester hours taught," Switzer said. "It used to be six to 10 hours taught."

Switzer said teachers will get paid for every unit beyond the six semester hours taught and this increase in salary is still coming from the same budget as last year.

"The same staff positions does not generate the same number of courses that it did last summer when the teaching salary was six to 10 semester hours," Switzer said.

He said this produces fewer course choices for the student which might produce fewer students.

ATTENTION EMPLOYED STUDENTS Check with the Cooperative Education Office Before June 23

If you employment is related to your academic major you may qualify for academic credit through the Cooperative Education Program. For information on eligibility requirements see Jane Ziegler, Claire Fecker, or Dr. Leonard Wood in Room 15, Student Services Building.

To obtain credit for summer semester, you must add CED 3001 to your program during the official add period. Go to the Co-op Ed. add desk in the University Union for the required forms.

Szerenyi retires after 13 years of library service

by Laura Rzepka

Joseph Szerenyi, director of library services at Eastern is retiring after serving 13 years in that position during which he said he made Booth Library a "very rare advanced library."

Wilson Luquire will succeed Szerenyi effective July 1. "I haven't met him but he is very well educated," Szerenyi said.

Luquire has been Associate Director of Library Services at East Carolina University in Greenville, S.C. since 1977. He received a master of library science and a Ph.D. in library and information science from Indiana University.

"The job of the director is to cry hard enough to the administration to give you more and more money. I was a pretty good erier," Szerenyi said.

The most significant accomplishment was opening the stacks up to the public in 1967, just three months after he assumed the position, Szerenyi said.

"The library was a dream place for everybody after the stacks opened," he added.

"We more than tripled the collection in 13 years," Szerenyi said. There were 154,000 volumes in 1967 and there are currently 460,000 volumes.

"My goal was to have a half a million volumes. If it wasn't for inflation we would have had that," Szerenyi said.

The periodical collection has tripled also, he added.

Another accomplishment Szerenyi cited during his term was the development of the self study center and the development of a "very good reference collection."

The self study center was created in the early 70s and currently has a microfilm collection of close to one million units of film and microcards, he said.

The reference section is a first-rate collection of information in every field of knowledge, Szerenyi said.

Two additional accomplishments during the past 13 years include a change in the classification system of library materials and an extension of library hours.

Materials in the library are currently classified using the Library of Congress system instead of the Dewey Decimal System, Szerenyi said.

Library hours have been extended to include weekend hours since 1967 and midnight service on certain days since 1978, he said.

Szerenyi would like to see further steps to computerize the library. He has asked for an expanded program request from the Board of Governors to put the card catalogue on computer tape.

The main problem with the card catalogue is caused by the people who remove the cards because they are "too lazy" to write down the call numbers, Szerenyi said.

"For this reason the card catalogue is becoming obsolete," he added.

"We can't replace the cards because we don't know which ones were taken," he said.

Szerenyi will stay at Eastern for one more year to work as a bibliographer, selecting books for new purchases.

Glover proposes letter to council

by Robin Scholz

During Wednesday's Student Senate session, Student Body President Bob Glover said he would send a letter to the Charleston City Council to propose a monthly meeting between the two bodies.

Glover's proposed letter is a result of the City Council's recent passing of an ordinance which bans the sale of drug paraphernalia in the Charleston area.

"It's a hindsight," Glover said of the Council's action. "But there is really nothing we can do about it."

Glover said the monthly meetings would give the Senate a chance to confer with the Council on matters which concern Eastern students.

In other Senate business, 10 study subcommittee were proposed and are pending the approval of next week's session.

The Senate next week will also elect a permanent chairman to replace temporary Chairman Mike Nowak.

Gym dandy!

Chicago welcomes would-be U.S. Olympians

The American public got a first-hand look at the finest gymnasts in the United States June 7 when the AMF National Mixed Pairs Championship came to the Rosemont Horizon in Chicago. The competition consists of 12 pairs of men and women, each a member of the U.S. National Gymnastic Team. Included in this group is the 1980 Olympic Team.

The Chicago exhibition was the fourth stop in a five-city tour. At each stop points are awarded to the top six pairs of gymnasts. After the next and final stop in Los Angeles, the pair with the highest point total will become the AMF National Pairs Champions.

The Mixed Pairs Championship provides a more relaxed competitive format than regular competition. The gymnasts are given the opportunity to perform in events of their choosing, but with scores being kept, the participants are eager to do their very best.

Clockwise from above competitors Kurt Thomas, Lynn Lederer, Amy Koopman, Beth Kline and Tim La Fleur perform their routines.

Council annexes Club to legalize liquor sales

by Vicki Shaw

Liquor will once again be sold at the Charleston Country Club, but the only difference will be that the sales will be legal.

Annexation into the city by the country club was approved by the City Council Tuesday night and will allow the country club to obtain a license and legally sell liquor to club members.

Mayor Bob Hickman, commissioner Wayne Lanman and commissioner Olga Durham voted unanimously to approve the country club's annexation request. Commissioners Clancy Pfeiffer and John Beusch were not present.

The Country Club will be annexed into the city by a 50-foot strip of land lying on the property of three area landowners and a portion of land along a railroad track connecting Mattoon to Charleston.

City Clerk Patsy Loew, said because the annex was approved, the country club could obtain a license at any time. The license will cost $2,000 per year.

The country club will have to pay the city sales tax on items sold plus real estate tax on all property.

Loew said there will be no changes in water and sewer hook-ups at the Country Club, which currently receives its water from a pond. A city water line will not be constructed unless the club pays for it, Loew said.

Hickman said he has been a member of the country club since 1967. He said his membership did not affect his vote on the matter.

Olga Durham, whose husband belongs to the country club, said she is willing to approve annexations by other groups such as the Charleston Gun Club. The only problem with other groups is they are too far out of the city limits to be annexed, Durham said. "If they can find a way to move closer to the city, I'll vote to let them in."

Recently, the Coles County Sheriff's Department issued warnings to several establishments in the area for allegedly selling liquor without a license.

Sheriff Chuck Lister said Tuesday that the department periodically received complaints about illegal liquor being served. The complaints came from people with "bent noses" or those who were mad about something and wanted to get back at someone else, he said.

He added that nothing could be done about the problem until someone signed a formal complaint and nobody did this, Lister said.

The department finally went to the state's attorney's office, he said.

Lister was told if he investigated the establishments serving liquor illegally and pressed charges, the state's attorney's office would prosecute, he said.

Lister said the sheriff's department went to the Charleston Country Club, gun club and speedway, and gave 10 days to halt illegal liquor sales. At the end of the 10 days, they appeared to be complying with the law, he said.

Lister said he assumed the establishments knew they were serving liquor illegally but it is a touchy subject which would have decided in court.

City attorney Tony Sunderman said the illegal operations were Class A misdemeanors. Offenders could be fined up to $1,000 for non-compliance, he said.

Lister said as far as he knew, the country club had been serving liquor since it opened. The gun club and speedway had also been serving liquor for some months, he said.

After learning they could no longer sell liquor, members of the country club submitted a petition to have the club annexed into the city of Charleston so they would be able to obtain a license.

Lister said in the 1930s after prohibition, a state law made all Illinois counties dry. It was up to individual townships to decide whether they wanted to remain dry or not. Charleston township voted to remain dry and still is.

Boil order lifted two days early

Charleston's three-day boil order was lifted almost two days early after workers finished cleaning the city's 300,000 gallon underground water storage tank early Tuesday.

The boil order began at 7 a.m. Monday.

The order was lifted around 10 a.m. according to a spokesman for the city engineer's office.

"We got the cleaning done and sent samples to the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency). Since the whole city was under the boil order, they phoned in the results and gave us the okay to lift the order," the spokesman said.

The spokesman explained that officials wanted "plenty of leeway" in cleaning the tank, which is why the city made the original boil order for three days.

Several indicated that the only harassment they felt was because they were not allowed to work longer hours for less pay.

Finalists for basketball coach named

by Brad Patterson

The four finalists for the head basketball coaching position at Eastern have been announced.

Three Division I assistant coaches and Panther assistant Randy Coonce are the four selected by a six-member search committee to receive interviews.

Other than Coonce, the three candidates are Gary Garner, assistant from the University of Missouri, Rick Samuels, an Iowa State University aide, and Jene Davis from Indiana University.

The position became open when Don Eddy resigned his 12-year post to become head coach at the University of Texas-San Antonio.

Eastern athletic director R.C. Johnson, who made the announcement Tuesday, thought the four represented the upper level of the nearly 50 applicants for the position.

"These four candidates have all had head coaching experience, close ties to the midwest, have recruited extensively in and around Illinois and are committed to Division I basketball," Johnson said.

Johnson has set a tentative timetable for getting a man for the job as July 4th.

"I would like to have it resolved by the 4th," Johnson said. "We hope to announce it by July 10, with a starting date of August 1. The new guy will need at least a month to prepare for the job."

Johnson was surprised at the number of inquiries he received concerning the vacant post.

"We had many more people call and write concerning the job than I ever thought we would have," he said.

Johnson went on to say that he thought the committee did a good job of canvassing the country looking for possible candidates, and that the applications came from all over the nation.

"We had inquiries from Alaska, Hawaii, California, New York," Johnson said. "I think we had a truly nationwide search."

Johnson also praised Eastern assistants Coonce and Danny Beard who have performed tasks such as scheduling, working on the basketball budget, and keeping the program in running order.

Coonce, 33, has been an assistant coach at Eastern for the past seasons, during which the Panthers compiled a 41-17 record and twice competed in the NCAA Division II Great Lakes Regional.

Davis, 34, has been a member of Bobby Knight's staff at Indiana for the past two years and before that he was the head coach at Columbus (Ohio) McKinley High School. There his teams won two state championships in 1975 and 1978. He was selected Ohio high school 'Coach of the Decade.'

Garner, 35, has been an assistant under Norm Stewart at Missouri since 1977. Garner has been in charge of recruiting for the Tigers, something that Johnson earlier saw as a vital requirement for the eventual head coach.

Samuels, 31, has been an assistant at Iowa State for four seasons. He was co-coach this past season when the head coach resigned in mid-year.

Finalist Coonce hopes for head basketball position

Eastern assistant coach Randy Coonce believes that the Eastern basketball team can win a national championship next season. And he wants to be the head coach of that unit.

Coonce, one of the four finalists for the vacant Eastern head coaching positions, thinks that his being involved in the program for the past two seasons will be a definite advantage.

"I think that is very important, especially with a veteran ball club coming back," Coonce said. "A national championship is well within reach next season. I think that would be a good way to end our years in Division II."

Eastern will be moving up to Division I in the 1981-82 season, and Coonce sees that as a challenge he is ready to accept.

"That is a great opportunity for our school and for our basketball team," Coonce said. "I look forward to seeing us play teams like Indiana State, Southern Illinois, Northern, and Illinois State."

"We have built up a lot of enthusiasm over the years here as a top Division II school, and I think we will continue that as a Division I school," Coonce said.

"I think people want to see quality basketball, and when you have two good Division I teams playing here, I think we will generate even more enthusiasm than we have now."

Coonce went on to point out that being a Division I team will help Eastern in the recruiting wars.

"Just the stature of being a Division I school will let us talk to kids we wouldn't talk to now," he said. "A lot of kids simply want to play at the highest level of college basketball, and they don't even consider a Division II school."

Coonce has been an assistant at Eastern for the past two seasons, and before that had been the head coach of Lake Land Junior College, directing the Lakers into two consecutive Sectional tournament appearances.

Coonce was a member of Don Eddy's first Eastern team in 1968-69, before coaching at several east central Illinois high schools.

"I have been a head coach, and I'm familiar with all the Illinois coaches at all levels," Coonce said, "junior college, high school, and university level."

"I have also been active in recruiting here for two years, and I feel that is an advantage," Coonce said.

Coonce is slated to be interviewed shortly, as are the three other finalists. Eastern athletic director R.C. Johnson has set a July 10 deadline for picking the successor to Eddy.

Netters take second in AIAW tournament

by Brad Patterson

The Eastern women's tennis team completed a successful season by taking second place in the AIAW Midwest Regionals in Detroit, Mich. on May 16-17.

The Panther women qualified for the AIAW national tournament in California on May 23-24, but were unable to attend because of a lack of money.

Eastern women's Sports Information Director Betty Temple said that no money could be obtained to send the women netters to the nationals.

"They just ran out of money, and there wasn't any anywhere else to give them," Temple said.

The women finished second behind Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, the same team that finished ahead of the Panthers at the state tournament in the fall season.

At Detroit, junior Debbie Belton came up with the most impressive performance of an Eastern player by winning the No. 2 singles tournament, defeating SIU-E's Pat Ziegenfuss 6-2, 6-1 in the finals.

Freshman Kristen Peterson was also a winner, taking the No. 6 singles championship by topping Pat Geary of West Virginia Wesleyan 6-1, 6-2.

At No. 1, sophomore Jill Anderson fell in the finals to Lillian Almeida of SIU-E in a tough three-set match, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4. Almeida defeated Anderson in three sets in the state tournament in the fall.

Junior Patti Groth lost in the semi-finals to Christy Cone of SIU-E at No. 3, Eastern's Josie Roberto fell at No. 5. Haberkorn went on, however, and won the consolation round of Denise DeBower of Hillsdale (Mich.) College.
